The Hysterical History of

"SIR WALTER RALEIGH"

Universal One Reel Comedy

* * *

Walter is a natural born traveler who returns to see his girl friend, Lizzie, Queen of England. Walt calls with a big cheer and immediately incurs the enmity of Sir Faucett Tubbs, knight of the bath. Tubbs is the queen's favorite until Walt blows around.

Walt relates the hazards of America: at one time he nearly lost his hat to check room boys and on another occasion ferocious taxi drivers demanded his money or his flask. Also, he related that Dixie jazz bands tortured him.

After hearing his tales, the queen raises him from the beerage to the peerage. Tubbs heats the sword point before handing it to the queen, but it fails to affect Walt, because he is all dressed up like a can of sardines, in his armor.

Walt falls out with the Queen but rescues her on an occasion by placing his cloak over a puddle. She asks him to walk with her, and at another puddle he removes his hat. Ten puddles father, he wears a barrel. His motto is: "When you have a chance to draw a queen, always discard your long suit."
